AF MoH recipient speaks at Dyess

By Airman James Kang
Dyess Public Affairs

A Medal of Honor recipient will speak at the Annual Heritage Banquet at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the Dyess Heritage Club.

The guest speaker at the luncheon will be retired Lt. Col. Joe Jackson, who won the military's most prestigious decoration during the Vietnam conflict. The colonel was awarded for his actions while flying a C-123 over Kham Duc Airfield, May 12, 1968. He voluntarily rescued a three-man combat control team from the special forces camp near the airfield, while under intense enemy fire.

Even under hostile conditions and a runway littered with debris, Colonel Jackson managed to land his aircraft and rescue the crew.

Colonel Jackson is the last airlifter to be awarded the nation's highest honor and is also a veteran of World War II and the Korean War.

The dress for the banquet will be the uniform of the day.

The cost is $6.95 for members and $9.35 for non-members.

"Colonel Jackson is an amazing warrior and leader whose resume mirrors an American history book during his three decades of service," said Capt. Mitch Spillers, 39th Airlift Squadron. "He is an icon for both the airlift and the bomber communities. It would be impossible to find a more appropriate speaker to represent the diverse heritage of Dyess."

For more information, please contact Captain Spillers at 696-2781.

317th AG change of command Monday

By Airman 1st Class Kiley Olds
Dyess Public Affairs

The commander of the 612th Combat Plans Squadron at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Ariz., assumes command of the 317th Airlift Group Monday in a 10 a.m. ceremony Monday at the wash rack.

Col. Paul Montgomery succeeds Col. Richard Johnston, who becomes the Deputy Director of Operations at Headquarters, United States Transportation Command at Scott AFB, Ill.

Prior to serving as the 612th CPS commander during the past year, Colonel Montgomery was deputy commander of that squadron for one and half years. Prior to that, he was an operations officer and commander of the 2nd Airlift Squadron at Pope Air Force Base, N.C.

The colonel was the lead planner and flight lead navigator for the Just Cause in 1989. He also flew C-130 formation that airdropped combat and combat support missions during Operations Desert Army Rangers into Rio Hato Air Base, Panama, during Operation Shield and Storm in 1990 and 1991.

Colonel Montgomery began his Air Force career after earning his bachelor's degree from the U.S. Air Force Academy in 1981. He earned his navigator's wings after completing Undergraduate Navigator Training at Mather Air Force Base, Calif., a year later. He also received a Master of Public Administration from Troy State University in 1993, a Master of Military Arts and Sciences from the United States Army Command and General Staff College in 1997 and a Master of Resources and Requirements from National Defense University in 2002.

During his nearly 23 years of service, Colonel Montgomery has earned the Meritorious Service Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Air Medal, Aerial Achievement Medal and Air Force Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster.

Leadership -- every airman a leader

By Maj. John C. Martin
317th Maintenance Squadron commander

A couple of years back, Tom Clancy, the preeminent historian of modern war and warfighting, interviewed many of the major players in the Gulf War and combined their experiences to produce a novel which he aptly titled “Every Man a Tiger.” In an attempt to craft a corollary vision for today’s Air Force, I’d like to offer a similar message, namely “Every Airman a Leader!”

What do I mean by “Every Airman a Leader?” Well, to put it bluntly, I mean that it is every airman’s responsibility to take a leadership role, both professionally and operationally, in whatever function he or she serves. The egalitarian nature of the United States Armed Forces, and of the Air Force in particular, is often a source of some humiliation and consternation when compared to the rigid hierarchies of the defense services of our friends and allies.

Obviously, individuality, when taken too far, can lead to outcomes incompatible with military service. History, however, has proven that within the confines of good order and discipline, the individual nature of the U.S. soldier has been one of our greatest strengths.

One example of this was the reaction of our servicemen during the D-Day landings. As related by Stephen Ambrose in his classic novel “D-Day,” throughout Operation Overlord almost nothing went according to plan. From the off-course flights of the troop transports and gliders, to the paratroop drops scattered behind enemy lines and the misdirected landings on Omaha Beach, there were innumerable opportunities for the entire campaign to come completely undone in the opening hours.

What saved the day? -- the individual initiative of the American soldier and airman. When things didn’t go entirely according to plan, they assessed the situation, analyzed it in light of their training and experience, took charge in the absence of superior leadership and pressed ahead to victory.

Another example, this time from the archives of the Soviet Union. As many of you know, Soviet and American military doctrines were almost diametrically different. The Soviets, true to their political philosophy of centralized planning, ran a very rigid system of control, discouraging any hint of individual thought or initiative on the part of their soldiers.

Unfortunately for the Soviets, Napoleon Bonaparte’s dictum that “no plan survives the opening moments of battle” proved all too true, and when things didn’t go according to plan, centralized leadership was far too slow to react to the constantly changing conditions on the ground. In the years just before the collapse of their empire, even the Soviet generals came to realize this.

The essence was succinctly captured by a Soviet general when asked to explain why the Americans proved superior in combat. His response: “Because war is chaos, and the Americans practice chaos on a daily basis.”

All humor aside, the general had put his finger on it, so to speak. It is precisely our practicing of disciplined chaos which makes us so formidable in war. And so we return to our original premise, “Every Airman a Leader.”

Mentorship -- Father defines mentorship as lifestyle

By Lt. Col. Gregory Cain
77th Weapons Squadron commander

On Nov. 9, 2003, my family, our Air Force and our country lost one of the most dedicated airmen who ever wore the blue uniform.

That airman was my father, retired Chief Master Sgt. Larry Cain. My dad, the chief, served honorably in the Air Force for more than 30 years, retiring in August 1987. He was, and still is, the greatest, most well-rounded mentor I’ve ever had, both in life and in military service.

As with most outstanding and effective mentors, my father never pulled me directly aside and said, “Son, let’s have a mentoring moment.”

Instead, he provided the kind of life and service example that made people around him want to be like him. He was clearly a leader worth modeling one’s self upon, and a few examples of the way he lived his life and served our Air Force are illustrative:

Chief Cain had one prime philosophy -- find your good people, take care of them and teach them how to take care of themselves. Today there is at least one active-duty colonel, two retired chiefs and countless other active-duty and retired senior NCOs who arrived at Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D. in the mid-1970s as junior airmen and felt the influence of my father. To a man, they all express great debts of gratitude to Chief Cain and claim he was directly responsible for the successes they were able to achieve in their careers.

One of them, retired

Lt. Col. Gregory Cain

Chief Master Sgt. Jim Slickers, spoke at my father’s funeral and relayed a story about a young staff sergeant who, back in 1976, was a little green, a little leery about this whole Air Force thing, and not completely sure he was doing the job he wanted to do for a career.

Chief Cain must have seen something there, however, because he pulled this young NCO aside, advised him to vigorously take advantage of service professional military education at every available opportunity, volunteer for and excel at the toughest jobs and take care of the charges assigned to him. The Chief believed in this young NCO, told him so and thus lit the young man’s motivational fuse. Of course, Chief Slickers himself was that NCO and he went on to have a long and illustrious career in our Air Force.

Chief Cain also had a very good grasp on the supreme importance of morale and esprit de corps. He understood better than most that ensuring your people are having fun is a preeminent responsibility of a leader. Members assigned to the Ellsworth Hospital in the late 1970s and early 1980s will tell you that winning the base softball championship for six or seven years running, being highly competitive in every intramural sport proffered by the fitness center, attending squadron picnics at Black Hills area lakes, participating in annual ice-fishing tournaments (that my father and Jim Slickers always seemed to win), socializing at squadron backyard parties and countless other social functions, were the glue that bonded and held the people of the squadron together.

In addition, all would agree that the chief was the driving force behind these morale-building functions, ensuring continual availability of interesting and fun activities as well as enabling and encouraging maximum participation by all his troops.

As a young high school kid growing up in this environment, one thing was perfectly clear to me: long before Air Combat Command adopted the “People First, Mission Always” mantra, my father understood and applied this most basic principle of leadership -- if you take care of your people, they will in turn gladly take care of the mission.

Though at first it may seem like most of Chief Cain’s time was consumed with duty and duty-related activities, nothing could be further from the truth. Recently I read Robert Coram’s book called “Boyd: The Fighter Pilot Who Changed the Art of War” and was struck by how much of himself and his time Colonel Boyd gave to service in the Air Force.

While his contributions to aviation and warfighting in general are significant and admirable, his inability to balance work with family is not a trait many would care to emulate.

In contrast, my father was the direct polar opposite. Yes, he worked hard and played hard, but he maintained family as a distinct priority in his life throughout his career and after. I can still hear his voice at the ball diamond, rising well above the crowd encouraging me to achieve. “Come on rookie, get a hit.”

What more can be said?

My father was there watching me and cheering me on. Not only was he a great airman, he was the consummate family man.

Finally, and importantly, Chief Cain defined the word commitment. He had no issue standing up for that in which he truly believed.

On more than one occasion I have heard my father’s peers or former subordinates tell stories about my father challenging the “establishment” armed only with supporting regulatory guidance and a firm belief in the best interests of his people and the Air Force.

It would be a lie to say that he won every battle he fought. But, the unquestionable truth is that he was uncompromising in his integrity, supremely dedicated to serving his country and doggedly adamant in his quest for excellence and against mediocrity. And, he did win most battles.

There is one related thing I remember him saying to me and others on numerous occasions: “The good guys get the breaks, and the bad guys get what’s coming to them.” The good guys were, among other things, those who knew the books, respected the books and lived by the books. The bad guys were all those who fell outside the good guy definition.

To be perfectly honest, I don’t think my father spent a lot of time thinking about or studying mentorship. He did what made good sense to him and what he thought was in the best interests of the Air Force. As a commander, I am well aware of the term mentorship and of the Air Force

What is required for leadership?

In simplified terms, just two things: The knowledge of one’s core convictions and the courage to act on them. You’ll notice that nothing in those two criteria requires any specific rank, grade or career specialty.

In fact, leadership can, and in a utopian world, would be exercised by every member of the service, from the most junior airman to the highest-ranking general, each according to his or her ability and level of responsibility, because each brings a unique capability to the fight.

I often remind my airmen during technical training graduation speeches that warriors play to their strengths, and that their particular strength in relation to their higher-ranking peers is curiosity and enthusiasm.

Our junior NCOs, on the other hand, have perhaps the greatest impact on the future of our force.

Think about it. Most of us can name without hesitation our first supervisor, but few who’ve been in the force more than 10 years can readily name our first commander, and so our junior NCOs wield an extraordinary power over the kind of force we’ll be 10 years from now.

Finally, our senior NCOs have the wisdom and experience to know what has worked in the past and will likely to work in the future, and they use that experience to formulate solutions with the greatest probability of success.

mentorship program, but I don’t believe it’s a scheduled office call or some other formalized effort. It’s a lifestyle.

I think my primary responsibility as a leader is to take care of my people. I look at my time as the 77th Weapons Squadron “Eagles” commander as a two-year term of service where I am serving the Eagles, their interests and the best interests of the B-1 community and the Air Force. I want all of my charges to know and believe that what I do is definitely not about me. I don’t think I should set the example, I should be the example.

I think I should be seen having fun while doing my job and that it’s my role to ensure my people are having fun doing theirs. I know that as long as I do that, they will take care of the mission. I think I should demonstrate to my squadron a balanced approach to military service and make them understand that family time is as important to me as I know it is to all of them. Finally, I think it’s extraordinarily critical for me to stand up and fight for those things in which my people and I firmly believe and which are supported by instructional guidance and are in the best interests of the Air Force.

In my mind, mentoring isn’t a science -- it’s more of a hazily defined art. I believe my father was very accomplished at the art, but I am still learning. Every day is a challenge for me, but I’m doing the best I can. And I know that my father, the chief, would be very proud of my efforts.

Air Force’s top comptroller visits Dyess

By Senior Airman Matthew Rosine
Dyess Public Affairs

The Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Financial Management and Comptroller visits Dyess Tuesday through Thursday to meet with senior leaders and receive an orientation flight in the B-1.

Michael Montelongo is also the principal adviser to the Secretary of the Air Force, Chief of Staff and other senior Air Force officials for budgetary and fiscal matters. Mr.

Montelongo is the 18th ASFMC and is the senior Hispanic official in the Air Force.

“Airmen on Dyess will have a chance to meet with one of the Air Force’s top leaders,” said 1st Lt. Scott Myers, 7th Comptroller Squadron financial analyst. “As the chief financial officer for the Air Force, Mr. Montelongo plays a key role in establishing sound financial management and shaping the strategic vision of the Air Force. Mr. Montelongo’s visit will provide him with a new perspective of the B-1’s capabilities and how it fits in the current and future arsenal of the Air Force.”

Mr. Montelongo entered public service in 1977 as a lieutenant in the U.S. Army, and completed the U.S. Army Ranger School at Fort Benning, Ga., in 1978. In 1996, he entered private industry with BellSouth Telecommunications, and later became a sales executive and consultant.

Mr. Montelongo has been active in civic pursuits such as the vice presidency of community services for the Harvard Business School Club of Atlanta, serving on the board of directors for the Georgia Voter Hispanic Registration Campaign and directing youth and young adult ministries for the Atlanta archdiocese.

“This visit gives us an opportunity to show how the financial resources of the Air Force are transformed into a highly versatile, multi-mission weapons system like the B-1,” Lieutenant Myers said. “And, we can also show Mr. Montelongo how Team Dyess is able to pull together and support both the B-1 and C-130 missions in West Texas.”

18th AF commander visits Dyess, 317th AG

By Senior Airman Matthew Rosine
Dyess Public Affairs

The commander of Air Mobility Command’s recently-formed 18th Air Force will visit Dyess Monday.

Lt. Gen. Bill Welser will be on-base as part of the 317th Airlift Group’s change of command ceremony.

“We in the 317th are blessed to have such a great leader in charge of our 18th AF team,” said Col. Steven King, 317th AG deputy commander. “We are grateful to have General Welser here for our change of command where Colonel Montgomery begins his role as the 317th commander and we are also excited to have the general here to shake the hands of the heroes of the 317th.”

General Welser’s visit comes on the heels of a recent visit to Dyess Feb. 5. During the general’s previous visit to the base “to meet the 317th troops” now under his command, he presided over a ribbon-cutting ceremony which officially opened the 317th Airlift Group’s Visual Threat Recognition and

General Welser

Avoidance Trainer. At that time, General Welser lauded the 317th for “leading AMC in realistic combat training and incorporating new technologies which improve combat effectiveness.”

General Welser then concluded his visit with a commander’s call where he presented Chief Master Sgt. Bob Myers with a Bronze Star for his leadership during Operation Enduring Freedom and bestowed the 317th Airlift Group with their fifth consecutive Air Force Outstanding Unit Award.

How well do you know your security forces?

Commentary by Chief Master Sgt. Gerald McDorman
7th Security Forces Squadron superintendent

Maybe a better question would be “How well do you want to know your security forces?”

For most people the answer would probably be “not at all.” After all, most people who come in contact with a security forces troop are not happy when they do. Either they’ve been stopped for a traffic or criminal offense, which of course they didn’t commit, or they’ve been the victim of a crime or accident. In any case it’s safe to say life usually isn’t too good when you’re spending time in our company.

Maybe getting to know us better is a good idea though. We are the most recognizable and visible troops on the base. You can’t get onto this base without seeing us -- we’re on the flightline, in the housing area, patrolling the base -- there isn’t anywhere on base we don’t go or haven’t been. We have primary responsibility for your safety and security and the defense of Dyess and various deployed locations that you visit periodically.

You wouldn’t purchase a security system for your home or car without knowing everything there is to know about it, so let’s talk about your human security system, the 7th Security Forces troop.

To simplify our task, let’s break this down to one troop, the “average troop” you can expect to see on the gate when you enter.

The average security forces troop at the gate has been in the Air Force for about two or three years. He or she is about 20 years old. She has a high school education and some college and wants more than anything to have a degree someday, but duty schedules and austere deployed locations make it difficult. He has a wife and probably 1 or 2 very young children, but he doesn’t see them much. She spends her off-duty time studying for upgrade to her 5-level and for the various duty certifications required. He spends about 200 hours a year in training. She conducts physical fitness training on her off time because there aren’t enough people to man posts for on-duty training. He works 14 hours a day and has never known 8-hour shifts. She’ll spend an hour on her boots and uniform tonight because they have to look good for roll call tomorrow. He’ll spend his day off getting his hair cut and going to the MPF because he doesn’t get time off post for personal errands. She only got 15 minutes to eat today because that’s the only way everyone else could eat.

He worked on Christmas and Thanksgiving Day. She’s hoping the weather will improve because standing in the heat or rain and wind for 14 hours isn’t much fun. He’ll never close early on a Friday for an official function. She’ll never open late for training because she does that on her day off. He knows as much about his weapon as he does his family. She knows as much about the Army as she does the Air Force.

He has deployed at least twice in those three years and each time was gone for at least 135 days. She goes TDY frequently for pre-deployment training to survive in hostile environments. He sleeps in a tent during Phase II exercises and never leaves the play area until ENDEX.

Vera West Women's Center...

Committed to Women at Every Stage of Life

Vera West Women's Center is designed to offer healthcare in a comfortable, convenient environment with professionals who are knowledgeable about women and their unique health issues. Women receive resources, education and services they need and deserve at every stage of life.

Resource Center and Education

Health assessments, a lending library, patient education and internet research are offered, and monthly seminars address current topics of interest to women of all ages.

Wellness Programs

Nutrition, stress management and smoking cessation classes, along with health risk profiles, aid women in the assessment of a potential need for lifestyle adjustments.

Obstetricians/Gynecologists

Several Hendrick Women's Health Network physicians' offices are located in the center for easy referral of patients for education, tests and consultation.

Comprehensive Gynecologic Oncology Care

This clinic, specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of women with gynecologic malignancies, provides education and emotional support throughout the treatment process.

High Risk Pregnancy Care

Abilene Perinatal Associates provide prenatal diagnosis, clinical obstetrics and genetic counseling for women experiencing a high risk pregnancy.

Comprehensive Osteoporosis Program

This program is designed to help women through stages of osteoporosis prevention, treatment and rehabilitation, including bone density testing, nutrition classes and exercise programs.

Hendrick Radiology Center for Women's Services

Screening and diagnostic services provided include mammography, breast ultrasound, stereotactic biopsy, bone density exams and pregnancy ultrasounds.

Women's Health at Hendrick Center for Rehabilitation

Located adjacent to Vera West Women's Center, Hendrick Center for Rehabilitation offers a complete evaluation and assessment of women's health-related diagnoses. This may include common problems associated with pregnancy and post-partum disorders, neck, low back and sacroiliac pain, urinary incontinence, sexual dysfunction and/or pelvic floor muscle weakness or pain. Evaluations are performed by licensed physical therapists, who thoroughly test musculoskeletal and neurovascular systems and design personalized treatment plans. Treatment plans may include postural education and realignment, manual therapy utilizing soft tissue mobilizations and advanced muscle energy techniques, deep heating modalities to promote muscle relaxation, muscular re-education, therapeutic exercise and a complete home exercise program. The goal is to restore healthy movement, function and comfort for a return to optimal living.

Connection to Hendrick Health System

Services connecting Vera West Women's Center and Hendrick Health System include Hendrick Balance Center, physician referral, Hendrick Sleep Disorders Center, Hendrick Cancer Center, Lee Medical Supply, Meek Children's Hospital, retirement living, BIOMETRICS® Fitness and Nutrition program, Hendrick Health Club and Hendrick Heartsaver Network.

Korea veterans recognized with new medal

AIR FORCE PERSONNEL CENTER -- A new defense medal will be issued to military members who served in the Republic of Korea, or adjacent waters, after July 28, 1954, including those serving there today, and those serving up to a not-yet-determined future date.

The Korea Defense Service Medal, not to be confused with the Republic of Korea War Service Medal, is a new medal that will be awarded to active duty, Reserve, Guard, veterans and retirees who were assigned, attached or mobilized to units operating or serving on all the land area of the Republic of Korea, and the continuous waters up to 12 nautical miles from shore and all airspace above those areas.

Individuals will only be awarded one KDSM regardless of time spent in Korea, said personnel officials. The medal does not have any associated promotion points under the weighted airman promotion system. It is directly above the Armed Forces Service Medal in precedence.

Applying for the KDSM varies:

- Active Duty, Reserve and Guard -- The KDSM will be issued to Air Force active duty, Reserve and Guard personnel by their servicing military personnel flights beginning this fall. Questions should be addressed to the contact center, at DSN 665-5000 or (800) 616-3775.

- Veterans and retirees -- Veterans, retirees or their next of kin may claim entitlement by writing to the National Personnel Records Center, 9700 Page Avenue, St. Louis Mo. 63132-5100. Requests should include documents clearly proving service and dates in Korea such as orders, performance reports, DD214, flight records, decorations citation or other official documents. Veterans and retirees should address questions to the NPRC customer service center, (314) 801-0800.

- Reserve and Guard veterans and retirees -- Air Force Reserve and Guard veterans, retirees and next of kin may submit their request with supporting documentation to Headquarters Air Reserve Personnel Center, 6760 Irvington Place 4000, Denver Co. 80280-4000. Reserve and guard veterans and retirees under the age of 60 should address questions to HQ ARPC, (303) 679-6134.
- Reserve and Guard veterans and retirees over 60 years old -- Requests from Reserve and Guard veterans and retirees over the age of 60 and next-of-kin of deceased reserve and guard veterans and retirees must be sent to the NPRC with supporting documentation. Questions should be addressed to the NPRC customer service center, (314) 801-0800.

At Dyess, initial issue of this medal will be provided by the MPF. If desired, members may purchase this medal at their own expense through AAFES. The AFPC will perform a batch update to all Air Force personnel in the fall of this year. Once the update has been accomplished the MPF will advise the base populace to check their awards and decorations through the virtual MPF. If at that time, anyone believes they are entitled to wear this medal and it is not updated, they should call the AFPC contact center. The AFPC contact center will check eligibility and perform the update, if required.

Leader

The officer corps, from second lieutenant all the way to four-star general, contributes along similar lines and so it's clear that our force is maximized only when all cylinders are firing and seriously hampered when any cog in the wheel fails to meet it's leadership responsibilities.

Let me return to the criteria I outlined for leadership -- knowledge of one's core convictions and the courage to act on them. We're fortunate in that the core convictions have been captured for us by former Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald Fogelman. Every airman knows them -- Integrity, Service before Self and Excellence in All We Do -- and combined they cover the appropriate response to almost every conceivable situation.

So what remains for us? Simply the courage to act on those convictions. That courage is not easily attained, but it can be cultivated little by little each day until it becomes almost second nature. No one who joins the Air Force does so out of passivity. On the contrary, military members are almost universally Type A personalities -- we get involved, we make things happen, we don't sit back and wait for events to determine our future. In the end, we can never allow passivity to prevail at the expense of our core values.

We've adopted a saying in the 317th Maintenance Squadron to remind us of this critical responsibility -- "Step Up!" And so today, I challenge each of you reading this article to do the same -- "Step Up!" Our future and the future of our way of life, depends upon it.

Security

She's been berated at least half a dozen times today because people don't like waiting in line to come on base. He's been called every name you can think of in the performance of his official duties. She's been threatened with violence from the very same people she's sworn to defend. He's been spit on, punched, beaten and kicked. She's been either hit with a vehicle or suffered several near misses. He or she may have already been shot at or very soon will be.

So why in the world would anybody want do this stuff? Why not do something that will earn you more money, respect or recognition? Why not do something easier, more comfortable or at least safer? Why spend a career in a field that is considered among the most stressed, but over-manned as well? There's got to be an easier way of making a living.

The answers to these questions vary. Maybe a quote by Lois McMaster Bujold

I've seen circulated as part of e-mail traffic can answer them.

"Any community's arm of force -- military, police or security -- needs people in it who can do necessary evil and yet not be made evil by it. To do only what is necessary and no more. To constantly question assumptions, to stop the slide into atrocity."

The men and women of the 7th Security Forces Squadron believe in doing what's necessary to secure a way of life for the people who live and work at Dyess and deployed locations throughout the world.

That's why they do what they do, and that's why we should all take a minute to get to know these defenders a little better. They truly are special people.

Systems experts critical to Herk mission success

By Master Sgt. Dan Carpenter
Dyess Public Affairs

Hearing the words “checklist for engine starting” from his C-130 pilot, Staff Sgt. Bill Prince replies “clear number three” and the loadmaster replies “three is clear.” Sergeant Prince turns the bleed on, the pilot presses the starter button and the engine turns. As the engine comes to life, Sergeant Prince watches the motor’s rpm, fuel flow, ignition, oil pressure, hydraulic pressure and parallel. At 60 percent, the pilot releases the starter button, and Sergeant Prince continues to monitor the engine as it comes on line.

All that work and monitoring for one engine; and that’s just the tip of the iceberg for a group of dedicated professionals from the 317th Airlift Group -- the flight engineers.

Sergeant Prince, a Nashville, Tenn., native, has been around “Herks” as the aircrews refer to the C-130, for his nearly 10 years in the Air Force. He previously worked on the aircraft as a crew chief then opted to cross-train into his present career field.

“I like the Herk and have been around it a long time,” said the married father of three.

“It’s a very dependable airframe. I got used to seeing guys leave with ‘my’ air-plane all the time, so when I had the chance to become a flight engineer, I jumped at it. The best part of this job is being up there flying around.”

The flight engineer career field is currently cross-train only, and Air Force officials said the preferred flight engineer candidate has a maintenance background.

The basic course, which is taught at Altus Air Force Base, Okla., lasts about seven weeks.

Then, each new engineer goes to a base for aircraft-specific training. For C-130s, that’s Little Rock AFB, Ark., where students spend approximately five months learning everything they need to know about the Herk.

“I equate the tech school to drinking from a fire hose,” said Sergeant Prince, currently assigned to the 39th Airlift Squadron. “There is so much material to learn and absorb, and only so much time to do it in.”

For Tech. Sgt. Gerald McCloud, who got his start as a C-141 crew chief, when the flight engineer call came, he answered, only to have his aircraft change from the Starlifter to the Hercules.

“The Herk chose me,” said the Mareno Valley, Calif., native assigned to the 39th AS. “In spite of the fact that it’s a slow airplane, the flights are long and my seat doesn’t recline, I really enjoy being a flight engineer on the ‘130’... mainly because we can go anywhere, fly low in any environment and feel like we’re a part of the fight.”

As with most aircrew positions, the flight engineers have had their share of times when things didn’t always go as planned.

For Master Sgt. Glen Lachowitzer, 39th AS, one of those times came in a faraway land.

“We were making our first landing in Afghanistan,” said the Vergas, Minn., native, and father of two.

“Today that’s not such a big deal, but back then, we were carrying a planeload of supplies to a group of Marines into a blacked out field. We also had to transport out two of our soldiers who had been killed in action. It was pretty intense, but we got the job done.”

For the pilots, co-pilots, navigators and loadmasters aboard the C-130, the flight engineer is an integral part of the crew and mission.

“They are the systems expert,” said Lt. Col. Patrick Mordente, 39th AS commander.

“They have an in-depth knowledge that goes beyond any other crew-member’s understanding of aircraft systems.”

A thorough understanding of the C-130’s electrical system, as well as emergency procedures and how the aircraft performed when that system completely failed, was an experience Sergeant Prince got first-hand.

“We were taking off in an Afghan dust storm under instrument conditions,” he said.

“Five minutes after we took off, we developed electrical problems, and ended up losing all our radios and instruments. After all was said and done, and we landed safely, I was thankful for an experienced pilot who called that situation ‘sporty.’”

It’s not always systems issues or blacked out conditions that present flight engineers and their fellow aircrew members with challenges.

Sometimes, these professionals find themselves doing a mission in the midst of enemy fire.

“We were flying in ‘The Box’ when we started seeing tracers zipping past us on all sides,” said Sergeant McCloud.

“Getting shot at really brought it home that we were fighting a war, and we were here for the fight.”

“Our flight engineers have racked up a record of accomplishments and successes few could match,” said Colonel Mordente. “I am honored to serve with these professionals -- they don’t get any better than this.”

Whether peacetime or combat, these three flight engineers echoed the sentiment that mission completion is their greatest reward.

And sitting high in the center seat behind the C-130 pilot and co-pilot, the flight engineers are carrying on their part to ensure mission success.

Tech. Sgt. Gerald McCloud checks the C-130’s bleed air system as part of regular monitoring required of all flight engineers.

For more information, call Dawn Willis at 698-4018 or Annette Macler at 660-9150.

Go fly a kite

The community center is hosting "Go Fly a Kite" from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday at the parade grounds. The center staff will be there to assist and to give advice on technicalities of flying a kite. Ribbons will be given out to the highest, biggest and smallest kites.

Name the Enlisted Club

The 7th Services Squadron is asking the base's creative enlisted minds to help them rename the Enlisted Club at the Hangar Center with a "Name the Club" contest. They are taking submissions until March 19. Boxes and forms are located in the Longhorn Dining Facility, Fitness Center, The Hangar Center in each of the enlisted bar areas and at The Heritage Club. Names can also be submitted via email to stephanie.kraly@dyess.af.mil. All submissions must include the person's name and phone number. The winning name will be released April 9 at 6:30 p.m. at the enlisted club and the person who submits the winning name will receive $100. For more information, call 696-2405.

Toastmasters

Club Dyess Toastmasters meet at 11:45 a.m. every Tuesday at The Hangar Center. Everyone is welcome. For more information, call 696-1344 or 696-4305.

James Kinsella (#15), 7th EMS, drives for the hoop as Jon Fisher (#1), 7th AMXS, tries to block him.

7th EMS cleans house in overtime

By Airman 1st Class Kiley Olds
Dyess Public Affairs

Michael Hollingsworth poured in 26 points, including one three-pointer, to lead the 7th Equipment Maintenance Squadron past the 7th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron 53-39 in overtime during over-30 intramural basketball action at the Dyess Fitness Center March 4.

"Everybody played hard," said Bobby Winford, 7th EMS player and coach.

"(The 7th AMXS) ran out of gas and we were able to take advantage and overpower them."

After a quick basket by the 7th EMS's Jesse Toney put his team on the board within the first minute of play, Hollingsworth followed up a minute later with a three-pointer to push the 7th EMS to an early 5-0 lead.

With a short jump shot 30 seconds later, teammate James Kinsella helped extend his team's lead to 7-0.

After five minutes of play, the 7th AMXS answered back when Tristan Ward put his team on the board with a three-pointer.

Ward continued to drop two more three-pointers over the next few minutes to help his team take the lead, 9-7.

For the rest of the game, the scores were close, with the lead handed back and forth between the two teams as each team's solid defense kept scoring to a minimum.

With less than four seconds to go in the game, Winford drove the ball down the court to make a last-second effort to tie the game, but was fouled as the 7th AMXS desperately tried to fight off the 7th EMS -- hoping to keep their narrow lead alive for the win.

Tension was in the air as Winford took aim at the free-throw line, making both shots count to tie the game, 39-39, sending the contest into overtime.

With overtime underway, Hollingsworth scored 10 of 14 unanswered points to help his 7th EMS teammates break away and shut down the 7th AMXS scoring machine clinching the win, 53-39.

"They just had too much height on us; we couldn't match up," said Robert Scarlett, 7th AMXS player and coach. "We hung in there, but we ran out of gas in the last little bit."

Mike Hollingsworth (#20), 7th EMS, awaits the outcome of a rebound battle between James Kinsella (#15), 7th EMS, and Ron Deos, 7th AMXS.

Dyess men, women compete in ACC, Abilene tournaments

The base-level bowling championships started Saturday and Sunday at Dyess Lanes.

Winners, both men and women, in scratch and handicap categories, will go on to compete at the Air Combat Command Bowling Tournament April 6 to 10 at Davis-
